

THE STANDARDS COMPANION • TEXAS EDITION

In most classrooms, Jews appear as ancient Israelites, then vanish until they reappear as victims of the Holocaust, with a two-thousand-year gap in between.

The Makor Project covers the whole history. Free, source-based, and ready for the courses you already teach.

The site at makorproject.org: the whole arc of Jewish history, from the Biblical era to the present.

What it is

The Makor Project is a free online textbook and teaching companion for Jewish history, civilization, and the evolution of antisemitism, from antiquity through the Holocaust to the present. Six Units and 57 classroom-ready Chapters, each with primary sources, discussion questions, curated readings, and a printable PDF, mapped to the standards you already work from. No login, no cost.

Why it exists

A growing number of states require students to learn this history. Almost none supply a curriculum. Most students reach the Holocaust having met the civilization that was destroyed only in passing, with little sense of how the hatred behind it was built over centuries, or what came after. Makor covers the whole arc, before, during, and after, so students meet the Holocaust as the culmination of a history, not its origin. The full case is on The Curriculum Gap.

How to use it, by grade

Makor serves three levels from the same body of work. For the early grades, the K to 5 program adapts the material into guided modules, projected slideshows, handouts, and vocabulary cards. For grades 6 to 12, the 57 Chapters work as textbook chapters: each has a readable history, primary sources and images with full credits, discussion questions, Classroom Connections, and a printable PDF. For college survey courses, the same Chapters carry the primary-source depth and bibliographies to assign directly. Critical-thinking lessons add source-literacy exercises for any level. Each item is a link or a PDF, so you can hand it out on paper, email it, or post it in Google Classroom or any learning platform, with no student login.

Where Makor fits the courses you already teach

Every Chapter is mapped to a course and a standard. Find the course you teach, and here are the Chapters to pull. The codes here are mapped to the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS), with the reading standards supported throughout. For a version mapped to another state or country, register on the site or write to education@makorproject.org.

Other ways to weave in the materials

Beyond the core lesson, the materials fit naturally into the rest of classroom life.

- Print-and-go guides.

The eight Makor Teaching Guides, one per grade band or subject, each opening with a first lesson planned beat by beat and a chart for the course.

- A student club.

The Makor Club kit turns student interest into a member-led history club: film nights, virtual field trips, an assembly plan, and community service.

- Current-event assignments.

Pair a story in today's news with the critical-thinking lesson The Primary Source vs. the Headline, or with the Contemporary Antisemitism Chapter, to build media literacy.

- Readings.

Assign a Chapter page, or a printable chapter from Makor Originals, with its discussion questions, as a reading.

- Films.

The Films collection gathers documentary viewing for the classroom.

- Field trips.

Virtual Field Trips visit sites and memorials online, and Chapters also point to local museums and historic synagogues for in-person visits.

- Symbols and misconceptions.

When they come up, bring in the guide to recognizing Hate Symbols and the Misconceptions reference.

- Explore and reference.

The online Museum of objects and manuscripts, the interactive Timeline, the Recurring Cycle, and the Glossary support projects, warm-ups, and independent study.

- Extra credit and independent work.

Any Chapter, with its sources and questions, stands alone as a research or writing assignment.

Professional development

A free, self-paced course, Teaching Jewish History and the Roots of Antisemitism, built entirely from the site. About six hours, taken in any order, ending with a classroom plan you build as you go and a certificate of completion. It follows the guidelines of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum and the IHRA.

How to help

Read it. Use it in your classroom. Then tell another teacher. The Makor Project grows by word of mouth among educators who care about teaching this history well. Share it with a colleague, a department, or a district, and help put this history where it belongs.

A note on standards

The codes in this companion are mapped to the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills (TEKS, Chapter 113) and the Holocaust Remembrance Week mandate at Texas Education Code §29.9072, with materials from the Texas Holocaust, Genocide, and Antisemitism Advisory Commission. Standards are revised periodically, so confirm the current codes against the official documents. The Makor Project is free. It curates the strongest existing material and points to the institutions behind it, and it adds original chapters and lessons of its own.
