THE STANDARDS COMPANION · MANITOBA EDITION

In many textbooks, Jews appear as ancient Israelites, then vanish until they reappear as victims of the Holocaust, with a two-thousand-year gap in between.

Teach Jewish History covers what comes between, and after.
Free, source-based, and ready for the courses you already teach.

The site at teachjewishhistory.org: the whole arc of Jewish history, from the Biblical era to the present.

What it is

Teach Jewish History is a free online textbook and teaching companion for Jewish history, civilization, and the evolution of antisemitism, from antiquity through the Holocaust to the present. Six Units and more than 60 classroom-ready Chapters, each with primary sources, discussion questions, curated readings, and a printable PDF, mapped to the standards you already work from. No login, no cost.

Why it exists

In Manitoba, Holocaust education is mandatory in all schools, in the grades 6, 9, and 11 social studies curriculum updated from fall 2025. Grade 6 includes the Holocaust in Canada's Second World War, Grade 9 the conditions that enable genocide, and Grade 11 History of Canada the country's response to the Holocaust and the plight of the Jewish people. A student can reach the Holocaust having met the civilization that was destroyed only in passing, with little sense of how the hatred behind it was built over centuries, or what came after. The site covers the whole arc, before, during, and after, so students meet the Holocaust as the culmination of a history, not its origin. The full case is on The Curriculum Gap.

How to use it, by grade

The site serves three levels from the same body of work. For primary school, the site's K to 5 program adapts the material into themed lessons with read-aloud books and handouts. For secondary school, Grades 6 to 12, the more than 60 Chapters work as textbook chapters: each has a readable history, primary sources and images with full credits, discussion questions, Classroom Connections, and a printable PDF. For university survey courses, the same Chapters carry the primary-source depth and bibliographies to assign directly. Critical-thinking lessons add source-literacy exercises for any level. Each item is a link or a PDF, so you can hand it out on paper, email it, or post it in Google Classroom or any learning platform, with no student login.

A note on order. Where you can, teach a Unit 1 Chapter before Unit 3 or the Hate Symbols guide. The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum asks teachers to show Jewish life first, "so that victims are not perceived only as victims."

Where the site fits the courses you already teach

Every Chapter is mapped to a course. Find the course you teach, and here are the Chapters to pull. The lines quoted here come from Manitoba's social studies Framework for Learning, the Grade 11 History of Canada curriculum, and the Grades 9 to 12 English Language Arts curriculum. - Print-and-go guides.
  The eight Teaching Guides, one per grade band or subject, each opening with a first lesson planned beat by beat and a chart for the course.
- A student club.
  The Makor Club kit turns student interest into a member-led history club: film nights, virtual field trips, an assembly plan, and community service.
- Current-event assignments.
  Pair a story in today's news with the critical-thinking lesson The Primary Source vs. the Headline, or with the Contemporary Antisemitism Chapter, to build media literacy.
- Readings.
  Assign a Chapter page, or a printable chapter from TJH Originals, with its discussion questions, as a reading.
- Films.
  The Films collection gathers documentary viewing for the classroom.
- Field trips.
  Virtual Field Trips visit sites and memorials online, and Chapters also point to local museums and historic synagogues for in-person visits.
- Symbols and misconceptions.
  When they come up, bring in the guide to recognizing Hate Symbols and the Misconceptions reference.

Professional development

A free, self-paced course, Teaching Jewish History and the Roots of Antisemitism, built entirely from the site. About six hours, taken in any order, ending with a classroom plan you build as you go and a certificate of completion. It draws on the guidelines of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum and the IHRA.

Pass it on

Read it. Use it in your classroom. If it works, share it with a colleague, a department, or a district.

A note on standards

The codes in this companion are quoted from Manitoba's social studies Framework for Learning, in which "Include" marks a mandatory part of an outcome and "e.g." an example, the Grade 11 History of Canada curriculum (2014, course 0105), and the Grades 9 to 12 English Language Arts curriculum, fully implemented in 2026–27. Codes carry grade, strand, and number, as in 6-KG-042. Confirm current wording against the official documents. The site draws on material from established institutions, credits them, and adds original chapters of its own.
